

Pennsylvania's State Flower: The Mountain Laurel

Did you know that Pennsylvania has an official state flower? It's called the Mountain Laurel!

Every spring, Mountain Laurel plants bloom with beautiful pink and white flowers that can be found growing in forests all across Pennsylvania—including in the woodlands around Bushy Run Battlefield. If you visit the park during the blooming season, you might spot some along the trails!

The Mountain Laurel became Pennsylvania's state flower in 1933 and is loved for its colorful blossoms and unique star-shaped petals. It also provides food and shelter for birds, insects, and other woodland animals.

As you color, imagine you're exploring the forests of Bushy Run and discovering these beautiful flowers growing among the trees!
